Market, the year in which the Austrian Socialist party won its absolute majority in parliament for the purpose of integrating the working class into the capitalist state, and the year in which the New Zealand Labour party criticized union-busting from the right.

The pro-Moscow Stalinist parties were nowhere able to rise above the level of reformism and opportunism, while the sharp right-turn of the Chinese government disillusioned those who believed that Maoism was a revolutionary current and appeared to set off a power struggle in Peking that resulted in the fall of Mao's heir apparent, Lin Piao.

Among the groups proclaiming allegiance to Trotskyism, the "International Committee" of Gerry Healy and Pierre Lambert flew to pieces under the impact of the Bolivian events.

Only the groups aligned with the Fourth International were consistently able to participate in, lead, and assemble cadres from the mass struggles of 1971—a role sometimes acknowledged by hostile governments in the form of attempted repression. The growth of Trotskyism was symbolized by the May 16 Paris march of 30,000 commemorating the centennial of the 1871 Commune.

These cadres will now use the lessons they have learned to meet the tests that will be posed in the coming year on the road to the socialist revolution. □
